

Francis Marion University School of Education

www.fmucenterofexcellence.org

2008-2009 Call for Papers

Teaching Children of Poverty On Line Journal

Tammy Pawloski, Editor

Teaching Children of Poverty (TCOP), a peer-reviewed Internet journal published by the Francis Marion University Center of Excellence to Prepare Teachers of Children of Poverty, is a forum for articles, guest editorials, annotated bibliographies or other appropriate submissions. TCOP welcomes manuscripts for consideration that address significant public and educational policy initiatives and other issues related to the nature and improvement of practice and effective strategies for teaching children of poverty.

Submissions may be presented from an academic or practitioner perspective. Successful manuscripts will address significant public policy, research, and practice-oriented topics, including:

- appropriate instructional strategies
- innovative teacher education
- effective parent partnerships
- groundbreaking educational policy
- emerging issues related to the field

Teaching Children of Poverty combines the quality ensured by peer review with the flexibility and enhancements made possible by an electronic format. Video, sound, hypertext links, searching capabilities, re-analyzable data sets, and the interactivity of the Internet, including text and graphics, will be offered in this journal.

Teaching Children of Poverty is of interest to educational researchers, practitioners, program planners, and teacher educators, as well as policy makers, philanthropists, parents, community leaders and other advocates for children.

General information and author submission guidelines for Teaching Children of Poverty can be accessed at:
<http://www.fmucenterofexcellence.org>